PROFILE

Kim is an accomplished freelance photographer with decades of experience capturing the essence of Oklahoma through her lens.

Her work has been prominently featured in campaigns and publications by the Oklahoma Department of Tourism, as well as in Oklahoma Today Magazine, where her photography has garnered prestigious accolades.

Her contributions to visual storytelling extend beyond magazines —her work was integral to the Oklahoma Department of Tourism's widely recognized “Come See for Yourself” commercial campaign in 2017.

Kim's expertise also shines in the film industry, where she served as the still photographer for Bad Press, a documentary that won the 2023 Special Jury Award for Freedom of Expression at the Sundance Film Festival.

Looking ahead, Kim continues to bring her artistic vision to major projects, with an upcoming commercial shoot for her tribe at the Muscogee Creek Nation Festival in 2025.
